

Stratford-Upon-Avon Local History Society .org.uk

How can we understand where we are or where we are going if we don't understand our past ?

With 75 registered Conservation Areas, over 3,000 Listed Buildings and 86 Scheduled Ancient Monuments there's a lot of history in the town let alone the stupendous environs roundabout. Our society is here to open this large book to draw your mind to the natural wonders, the tremendous innovations and the great people, who lived here and left their mark, many of which still exist today. It's all our history. Welcome

Stratford-upon-Avon Local History Society

Registered with the British Association Of Local History we are a new society, here in Stratford, to provide researchers at home or in schools, colleges and universities, initial material to conduct studies and to find forward contacts to people who are likely know more.

We're not here to usurp any other group about a town that we all know and love. Quite the reverse we would like you to visit the others listed on our Links page. It is wonderfully true that William Shakespeare and his many associates contributed greatly to the richness of the English language, our culture, our humour and how stage drama and poetry are portrayed.

Most people don't realise is how much history there was here before and since The Bard and how many inventions and significant pieces of history were fomented here. Our collected pointers to local resources and archives of local material are not there to seek to exclude Will The Quill but to redress the balance of factual support whilst engaging you the reader in unique ways.

We are passionate about the 'wider Stratford' and have good relations with people in the town. We have infinite online data storage with no fee so we have no costs to pass on.

We are looking for contributors of any kind – if you can't write we'll do that for you –but audio could be a thing in future. If you have local material that you want saved and/or disseminated come join us for Coffee on the days set out on our Home page for a vibrant chat.

Matt Goodman
Chairman & Webmaster

stratforduponavonlocalhistorysociety.org.uk

Stratford-Upon-Avon Local History Society .org.uk

How can we understand where we are or where we are going if we don't understand our past ?

With 75 registered Conservation Areas, over 3,000 Listed Buildings and 86 Scheduled Ancient Monuments there's a lot of history in the town let alone the stupendous environs roundabout. Our society is here to open this large book to draw your mind to the natural wonders, the tremendous innovations and the great people, who lived here and left their mark, many of which still exist today. It's all our history. Welcome

Stratford-upon-Avon Local History Society

Registered with the British Association Of Local History we are a new society, here in Stratford, to provide researchers at home or in schools, colleges and universities, initial material to conduct studies and to find forward contacts to people who are likely know more.

We're not here to usurp any other group about a town that we all know and love. Quite the reverse we would like you to visit the others listed on our Links page. It is wonderfully true that William Shakespeare and his many associates contributed greatly to the richness of the English language, our culture, our humour and how stage drama and poetry are portrayed.

Most people don't realise is how much history there was here before and since The Bard and how many inventions and significant pieces of history were fomented here. Our collected pointers to local resources and archives of local material are not there to seek to exclude Will The Quill but to redress the balance of factual support whilst engaging you the reader in unique ways.

We are passionate about the 'wider Stratford' and have good relations with people in the town. We have infinite online data storage with no fee so we have no costs to pass on.

We are looking for contributors of any kind – if you can't write we'll do that for you –but audio could be a thing in future. If you have local material that you want saved and/or disseminated come join us for Coffee on the days set out on our Home page for a vibrant chat.

Matt Goodman
Chairman & Webmaster

stratforduponavonlocalhistorysociety.org.uk

